$100 SAVINGS BOND

Details

- Series I Bonds are purchased for Face Value but accumulate interest calculated monthly, compounded semi-annually for 30 years.
- Series I bonds accrue earnings based on a combination of the fixed interest rate and the semiannual inflation rate. This composite rate reflects the combined effects of the fixed interest rate and the semiannual inflation rate. The government announces the composite rate each May and November. Negative as well as positive changes in the CPI-U are used to calculate composite rates. In the event of deflation, the negative change in the CPI-U would reduce the composite rate. If deflation were such that it more than fully offset the fixed rate of return and produced a negative composite rate, the government would not reduce the composite rate below zero. In this event, the redemption value of a Series I bond would remain constant through the period and become the base for calculating earnings that might accrue during the subsequent period.
- Earnings on a Series I bond, if any, accrue on the first day of each month. A Series I bond may be redeemed beginning 12 months after issuance.
- There is a 3-month penalty for cashing in an I Bond before it is five years old.
